Why Habitat for Humanity is needed

The world is experiencing a global housing crisis. About 1.6 billion people live in substandard housing. 100 million are homeless. One billion people (32 percent of the global urban population) live in urban slums. In the U.S. alone, 95 million people have housing problems.

Housing provides:

- Stability for families and children.
- Sense of dignity and pride.
- Health, physical safety, and security.
- Increase of educational and job prospects.
- Attracts economic investment and development

Housing is a great means of wealth creation

- Housing construction creates job opportunities
- The process of securing land tenure helps to increase access to credit.
- Contributes to thriving school systems and community organizations.

Housing must become a priority

- The percentage of people without access to decent, stable housing is rising.
- Increasing the housing supply across the globe is essential.
- Adequate housing is vitally important to the health of the world's economies, communities, and populations.

A World Where Everyone has a decent place to live.

Habitat for Humanity provides decent, affordable houses to families in need.

YOUTH

AmeriCorps - Devote one year to full-time service with Habitat for Humanity affiliates around the country. Work in construction or volunteer management and resource development.

Campus Chapters - student organizations on high school or college campuses that partner with the local Habitat affiliates to educate, build and fund-raise.

Collegiate Challenge - a year-round alternative break program that offers students, 16 years of age and older, the opportunity to spend one week working in partnership with local affiliates, communities and families to help eliminate poverty housing.

Teacher and Youth Leader Resources - Habitat provides project plans, non-building activity ideas and curriculum to get young people involved with Habitat's mission.

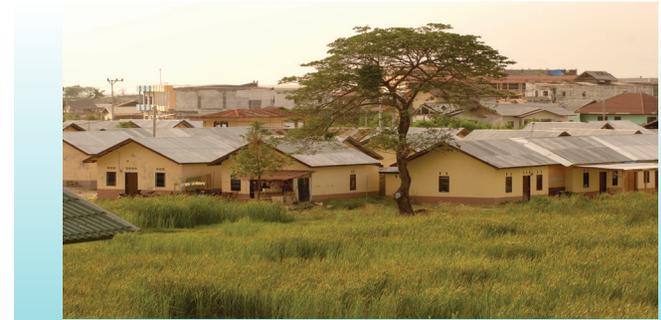

Youth United - community youth come together to fund and build a Habitat home. Youth ages 5 to 25 serve as the leaders, planners, fund-raisers and public relations specialists, and youth ages 16 to 25 build the house.

WOMEN BUILD

Women Build is about including women. While women make up 50 percent of Habitat for Humanity's volunteer force, they are often a minority on the construction site. When women crews take the lead, Habitat increases its capacity to build more homes.

The Women Build program works to recruit, train and nurture women volunteers to build houses. It offers a comfortable, welcoming work site where women quickly learn construction skills and take the lead in building new Habitat houses.

The first all-women build took place in 1991 in Charlotte, N.C. Since then, Habitat's Women Build crews have built more than 1,000 houses in 14 countries around the world. The Women Build program empowers women to join together across all boundaries to make a difference in their communities.

INTERNATIONAL

Habitat for Humanity was founded as an international nonprofit organization in 1976. The pilot project took place in Zaire (now Democratic Republic of Congo) in 1974. Habitat currently builds in more than 25 countries in its Africa and Middle East region.

Two billion people around the world live in poverty housing, but Habitat for Humanity International offers families a hand up. Habitat has more than 22 affiliates in its Latin America and Caribbean area and has built over 70,000 homes.

Habitat's presence in the Asia-Pacific region reaches more than 25 countries. The devastating 2004 earthquake and tsunami affected families in many countries in this region. Habitat has helped thousands of families rebuild communities.
